

Technical Training

SMART will devise, commission, source, facilitate or arrange any technical training course your company needs. SMART has a comprehensive range of partner colleges and Universities, as well as an extensive range of key manufacturing companies who can offer bespoke training, and associate specialist companies covering the entire academic and scientific repertoire of technical training. SMART courses range from 1-day seminar on a one to one basis, to 12 month plus courses culminating in a recognised international qualification, and standard University and College courses. This training can be developed for small or large groups and can be either on "site at your Company or in College/ University or SMART fully equipped training facilities. Courses can be designed to meet your specific training needs, budget and duration. SMART also can provide courses leading to a vocational qualification. We can source courses, top professional lecturers, and arrange delivery of all subjects for the oil, petrochemical and general engineering industries. Depending on your needs, you can either pick a course from the extensive list of courses that we have arranged over the last 10 years, or request us to submit proposals to you from our training providers based on clearly defined training needs. We are happy to discuss these fully with you to ensure that your course will be tailored to your specific requirements.