

On Site Courses

SMART courses can be delivered in any country in the world, as per your requirements. SMART also specialises in on-site courses, where we bring the trainer(s), equipments and course materials to you and deliver the course in your offices or workshops. This type of training is highly cost effective, and can be targeted to exactly your own or company needs. SMART can offer customised training for business, science, technology, English language, welding/NDT and a full range of technical subjects. Some courses will also conclude with the examination and testing of delegates, against international standards, culminating in the issue of formal qualifications for successful candidates.

We specialise in on-site English language courses, and in the past 5 years SMART personnel have administered on site courses for 3,800 individuals who have all taken formal Cambridge examinations in English. We have extensive experience in placing English teachers with clients, and managing the shipment of training materials, co-ordination of examinations with the University of Cambridge or other examining body, visas and work permits for teachers etc. SMART personnel have many years of experience with City and Guilds and have successfully participated in hundreds of schemes by providing help and support with the logistics of providing examination, centre and candidate support for on site training. SMART can supply specialist teachers and lecturers in all business and technical disciplines and can develop the course you want to be held within your company. SMART uses top professionals and academics who have worked with our staff for many years, and who have a proven track record of success.
